

A photograph of a rugged coastline. In the foreground, a dark, pebbly beach stretches from the bottom left towards the center. To the right, the ocean's edge is marked by white foam from breaking waves. Further back, dark, craggy rocks protrude into the sea. The sky is a pale, hazy blue, and the overall lighting suggests a calm but slightly overcast day. The text is overlaid in a large, white, serif font, centered horizontally and spanning most of the vertical space.

Revelation 02:05 Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent.